

Maher Terminals is committed to a Greener Future

Fellow Maher Employees,

We, at Maher Terminals recognize the significant interconnection between providing efficient service to our customers and our responsibility to the environment, our employees, and the local communities where we operate and which many of us also call home. With an emphasis on environmental stewardship, we are pleased to announce our newly formed Environmental Initiatives Committee, a sub-committee of the Company's Enterprise Risk Management Committee, chaired by Frank Hrdina and Jay Ruble. Committee members are: Max Safarzadeh, Millie Galarza, Michael Mazur, and Brian Poehler from Port Elizabeth. A representative from our Fairview Terminal in Prince Rupert will be announced in the near future.

Furthermore, the Company has initiated a Sustainable Port Infrastructure Program for our Elizabeth, NJ operations. Under guidance from the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, and the Port Authority of New York/New Jersey, we have launched several environmental initiatives across our terminal operations. These initiatives include an overall emissions reduction plan centered upon the use of renewable energy, investing in cleaner, safer, technologies, and the implementation of energy conservation measures. To learn more about these initiatives, along with the Best Practices Sustainability Guide for our employees, please visit the updated Environmental Stewardship section of our website.

Our focus on sustainability and environmental stewardship has allowed our team at Maher to lower our carbon emissions and reduce our dependency on domestic and foreign oil. Within the framework of this program, we will reinvest in our operations to produce a healthier environment for our employees and local communities while reducing the overall environmental impact of our organization.

We at Maher Terminals are proud of our commitment to sustainable growth and remain steadfast in providing the most efficient, reliable, and dedicated service for our clients, partners, and employees. In the years ahead, we will be well positioned to further maximize cost-savings opportunities while maintaining the standards that have brought us to where we are today.

With thanks for your support of our environmental programs and initiatives;
The Maher Management Team
